Apple macOS Catalina Upgrade Guide Category:Mac OS Category:MacOS A new potent radioiodinated probe for studying the structure of membrane proteins of large biomolecules. A radioiodinated photoactivable probe (9-iodo-1-[4-(4-n-decyl-1-sulfonylamino)phenyl]9H-carbazole, 9-is) has been prepared by alkylation of 9-carboxamido-(4-n-decyl-1-sulfonylamino)phenyl]9H-carbazole (4, I). This non-covalent ligand is known to be an antagonist for trkA receptor tyrosine kinase. The reaction of 3-4 with I led to a mixed 1:2 (3:4) ligand-to-protein complex which displayed high specific binding in guinea pig brain membranes. The ligand photolyses selectively at 405 nm, the absorption maxima of the resulting product 9-iodo-3-[4-(4-n-decyl-1-sulfonylamino)phenyl]-9H-carbazole (10, SI) is at 490 nm. The iodinated ligand possesses a high selectivity for brain trkA receptor tyrosine kinase. It has been used as a highly sensitive radioactive probe for studying its membrane topography. The absorption spectrum of 10 shows a significant red-shift relative to that of the ligand, suggesting that the ligand binds to the flexible protein N-terminal region.
